This site is not available in your country If you are working or playing on your computer for hours on end, with a background interesting to look at one of the best ways to spice up your view of the system. No one likes staring at a blue screen or Windows logo for hours on end, so let's make things a little more interesting, shall we? We've used the almost endless options of nice images and animated backgrounds to find you the best backgrounds out there. But we didn't just pick the nice ones. We looked specifically at images that make a good background. They're not too junk, offer plenty of space and clarity for icons, and in the case of the smarter ones, give you plenty of options to customize them how you want. Static screens Don't fancy all the hype and distractions of something animated or interactive? Not a problem. You can still choose from millions of beautiful images, and even if they're not specifically designed to be a background, that doesn't mean they won't work as one. Because what we're talking about it is there's essentially just photography, there's an almost infinite amount of options on the internet. To get you started, however, sites like WallpaperFusion have a bonanza of beautiful backgrounds to choose from, including landscapes, fantasy creatures, cars, and cartoon characters. Many of them are also compatible with JigsawMania. NASA has shot a collection of the best images ever in space - all of which makes black for a major contrast to your desktop briefs - including some of Cassini's last snaps before it died. There are also some stunning historical shots from the NASA archives if you want to have a retro space-themed background. If you prefer something less factual and more digitally created, DigitalBlasphemy has been making good backgrounds for years. Some of the links require premium memberships or payments. For guaranteed free images, these are our favorites. For a taste of what you can find, check out this user's collection of beautiful background-ready photography over at Unsplash. Finally, if you're looking for something more minimalist, check out SimpleDesktops.com, which has a range of distraction-less options for pretty much every platform imaginable. Here are a handful of the best backgrounds we've found in our search. Click the source link in the caption box to be taken to the full-size version. Animated backgrounds Go one step beyond standard background images, animated backgrounds give you a bit of movement to your background. It can really make your desk come alive, as long as it doesn't zoom all over the place, which can be distracting. There are many ways to help make these fancy backgrounds work, including the DesktopHut Windows App, WallpaperEngine, and Bionix's GIF Background Animator (along with a wealth of YouTube videos). Although some contain more movements than others, once set up, your desktop background looks a bit like this: In terms of actually finding Backgrounds, companies like Uscenes offer lots of premium, animated backgrounds, while DesktopHut has a large set of free ones. If you're desperate for more of this, check out the Living Backgrounds subreddit where you can find a constant stream of new animated backgrounds to choose from. These are some of the best animated backgrounds we could find, though of course it notes that these are just still images of them. Click the caption link to take you to the download page. Interactive backgrounds If you're a fan of animated backgrounds, there's a good chance you'll also want high quality, customizable, interactive background. You'd be willing to shell out some extra cash for the stunning visual effects and added features these backgrounds have to offer. You can customize things like lighting and background and even play built-in mini-games. Here are some examples of some incredibly interactive backgrounds: Rain gauge is the ultimate tool for all-comprehensive customization because it's not limited to personal background alone. You have the ability to create custom live-stat trackers, you can choose visualizations for music players, and you can even customize icon formats. We recommend that you fully install these backgrounds to see them in all their glory, because the still picture we offer hardly conveys their true quality. This is the picture, color, or pattern you see on the main OS screen after your computer has stolen on. In the picture, you can see an example of a Microsoft Windows XP desktop with a background depicting white clouds in a blue sky over a green hill. Confusion between screen saver and background Many new computer users confuse a background with a screen saver, which is the moving picture or animation shown when you're away from your computer. See our screen saver page for further information and related links on this term. Related pages Background, Desktop, GUI, Live background, OS terms, Windows Theme Here at How-To Geek, we think iOS's Live Background feature is pretty neat, albeit underused. If you don't want to spend the time making your own big Live Background, one of the next best options is to use a GIF. As with most things on the iPhone, there's an app for that. In this case, it's GIPHY, one of the best GIF apps on iOS. Download it and let's get started. Open GIPHY and search for a GIF you like. There are a few things to keep in mind when you're looking: Your iPhone background is vertical. Unless you want a very small or very cut GIF, you need something which is also vertical. Live Backgrounds are stationary most of the time. You have to choose something where the still frame looks good. GIFs generally have low image quality. It's worth it a little time to find something that is of high quality. It will look much better. After a little searching, I found this amazing Flanders GIF. Once you've found your GIF, open it and tap the three small tinges in the lower right corner. Next, select Link to Live Photo. You'll have two options: Save as Live Photo (Full screen) and save as Live Photo (Match the screen). Full screen crops the GIF, so it takes the whole of your iPhone's display while fitting the screen adding black bars. Select the one you want, and the Live Photo will be stored in your camera roll. I would suggest both trying and seeing which ones work better for you. Now it's time to set your background. Go to Settings > Background > Select New Background. Select Live Photos and then the live photo you just saved. Place the GIF how you want it, and then tap Set. You can choose whether you want it to be on the lock screen, the Home screen, or both. And with that done, you'll have a silly, sexy new GIF as your background. Setting up your favorite GIF as your background is a great way to add some personality to what otherwise uses the same phone as millions of other people. You can even create and set up your own GIFs.
